DROMIAC TAKES OVER HOTEL*CHAS. SADLER RELINQUISHES
LEASE ON RENO OVERLAND.
GOES TO SAN FRANCISCO

RENO, Nev., April 30.—Arrangements were concluded yesterday for the taking over of the lease on the Overland hotel by Alex Dromiac from Charles Sadler. The transfer will take place at midnight tonight and Mr. Dromiac will personally manage the business.

A day or two later Mr. Sadler will depart for San Francisco, where he has purchased a half interest in the Grand hotel on Turk and Taylor streets. This is one of the finest furnished hotels on the coast and contains 200 rooms.

The departure of Mr. Sadler removes one of the most prominent men in public affairs. He is a city councilman, mayor pro tem, president of the state agricultural society, president of the Reno Automobile club, president of the Reno Rifle club, and vice president of the Interurban railroad, of which he was one of the promoters.

He has conducted the Overland hotel ever since it was completed, nearly ten years ago. Although he will have headquarters at San Francisco, Mr. Sadler will come frequently to Reno to look after the affairs of the Overland Annex, which he retains. Mrs. Sadler will remain here for a few weeks.

Mr. Sadler will not resign his position as councilman for some time to come, as his business affairs in this city will keep him here a considerable portion of his time.

for Your Printing

When you can have first-class work done right here, by first-class union printers.

The business man who sends out of town for his printing injures his own business as well as that of others. While on the other hand the man who patronizes home institutions increases the town's pay roll, and thereby builds up his business.

The printers and book binders in the cities of surrounding states do not come here to spend their money.

If You Know What Is Good Then Ask for It

Don't tell the clothing store to give you a suit of clothes. Tell them what kind of a suit. Don't ask for soap. Ask for the name of a soap. If you want a shoe, get a standard shoe.

You can never be sure that a nameless thing is good, either in merchandise or men.

Thousands of manufacturers are making the best product in their power and stamping it with their brand or their name. They spend their good money to tell you that name, and the government has made laws to protect it.

Why don't you do your share?

More than half of the cheap imitations and "shoddy" products that come into the market, creep in through the carelessness of you men and women who do not recognize the standardization of a brand.

The manufacturer who trademarks his clothes and guarantees them all wool; the maker who brands his clothes and vouches for them being pure linen; the producer of any article who signs his name to what he makes, must stand back of what he says.

And you ought to consider it your duty to stand back of him. For he is the man that sees that the quality of merchandise is not strained.

The merchants stand back of him. They advertise his goods; they help to maintain his standards. But you, the buying public, are the ones at fault. You are to blame when you find cotton in your clothes, paper in your shoes and sand in your sugar.

There is a name for every good product on the market. For your sake learn these names and use them when you buy. Give these makers some encouragement to maintain their standards of quality.

Look through this paper today. Wherever you see a good trademark, fix it in your mind and use it when next you go into the stores.

Neither the merchant nor the manufacturer can do it all. You must do your share.

The Way Modern Civilization
Has Been Carried to Tripoli

NEW YORK, May 1.—When Italy, on September 29, began the occupation of Tripoli, she justified this action in a note to the European powers, by declaring it the only way in which modern civilization could be carried to the people of Tripoli and the country developed, both morally and materially. Turkey, Italy declared, had forced Tripoli to lag far behind the surrounding countries in progress towards civilization.

On March 29, therefore, just six months after Italy began the forcible occupation of Tripoli, Roy W. Howard, general news manager of the United Press Associations, requested of Premier Giolitti a statement of just what Italy had done in that time towards redeeming its promise to civilize and develop Tripoli. The following statement, based on information secured expressly for the United Press, by orders of Premier Giolitti, was today authorized for publication:

(Copyrighted, 1912, by the United Press Associations.)

ROME, May 1.—Previous to the occupation of Tripoli by Italy, it may be justly said that Turkey had done nothing towards the development of the country save the establishment of methods, both excessive and violent, for the collection of taxes and duties. Nothing had been done towards the building of roads, the establishing of water supply and distribution, the enforcing of public sanitation, or the providing of public education, save to accept what had generously been done in this latter respect by the various Christian missionaries.

With the Italian occupation of Tripoli, there was immediately established a general administration of public service with the ultimate aim of implanting in Tripoli all of the branches of public service and public development that exist in the mother country of Italy itself. Under this general government was established at once separate departments for the administration of a system of public records, of post and telegraph, of public engineering, of customs and duties, of health and sanitation, of civil justice, of a public port, of public safety, of municipal government, of schools, of agriculture, of charitable institutions, and of the excavation and preservation of the monuments and remains of antiquity. All of these branch departments of administration are now fully established and much has been accomplished by each.

At the actual moment of Italian occupation, the greatest problem that confronted the new government was that of public health and sanitation, both temporarily and permanently. The country, at all times subject to infectious epidemics, was then being swept by cholera, which had begun in 1910 and continued into the fall of 1911. Nothing had been provided under the Turkish regime with which to combat this situation, save a single isolation hospital, a municipal hospital and a municipal pharmacy, all in a state of deplorable sanitation themselves, and all practically worthless from a lack of adequate equipment.

A sanitary commission was at once established by the new government and such vigorous measures taken, not only against the epidemic itself but for the establishment of permanent sanitary conditions, that the cholera was entirely stamped out in a very short time. Since then, adequate hospitals with ambulance service have been constructed, chemical and bacteriological laboratories equipped, a pure water supply insured and every precaution and preventative provided for combatting and wiping out the various infectious plagues to which the native population in the past has been subjected.

In the providing along of an adequate pure water supply there was involved the construction of a gigantic reservoir with a capacity of 2000 tons of water, a filtration plant, a steam pumping station, and the building of aqueducts from the wells of Bu-Mellana to the city of Tripoli. As further safeguards of the public health, this commission now has under way, the erection of an immense steam laundry plant and public wash houses for all who care to use them.

The work of this sanitation commission has gone hand in hand with that of the new municipal government which has been established for the city of Tripoli, and in the administration of which many of the natives have been retained. The homeless people of the city were first provided for, thousands being removed from the congested quarters of the city to the oases where they were provided with food, clothing and farming utensils. Later, many were brought back and established in homes in the districts closer to the city. A service of municipal cleanliness was then installed, including everything from street sweeping up; the entire city lighted with electricity and acetylene; meat, fish, fruit, vegetables and other markets established; a municipal slaughterhouse provided and also an immense municipal baking plant to insure proper food.

The municipality is now working out a system of public transportation and in a short time there will not only be a street service of horse cars but of automobiles as well.

A complete system of public protection has been established with a police system for the city, while branches of the Royal Carabinieri have been installed throughout the country. Scores of the former police officials of Tripoli are now enrolled in the Italian police service.

While Italy has thus provided first for the most pressing needs of the people of Tripoli, she has also seen to it that the intellectual development has kept pace with the new material progress. Previous to the actual Italian occupation of Tripoli, the Italian government had already established there schools attended by 1000 natives. These schools worked side by side with those maintained by the various missionaries and attended by 350. In addition, the Turks themselves had established schools, attended by 1250 students, including a military school, and a day and night school which had been the especial provision of the Young Turks' committee of Union and Progress. Since the actual occupation, Italy has made it possible for all of these schools to continue under improved conditions, while a special commission is working out the problem of modern school education for the entire country.

The port of Tripoli has also been fully equipped and systematized for safe navigation and commerce. A new lighthouse has been erected, a wireless station installed, semaphores provided for signaling vessels at sea and nautical data and charts prepared for coastwise navigation and commercial development of all the seaports of Tripoli and Cirenaica.

Finally, Italy has also undertaken to bestow the same care upon the historical monuments and remains of the ancient civilizations which existed in Tripoli that she bestows upon those at home. Already enough of these have been discovered to throw great light upon the peoples of the past and to be of permanent value to the entire world. The branch of the new government which has this in charge has already undertaken the isolation and preservation of the arch of Marcus Aurelius that has been discovered, while other excavations will be made as rapidly as possible.

In short, Italy feels that in the six months she has occupied Tripoli she has done more for the moral and material development of the country than was done under the entire Turkish regime and that she has given ample evidence of her sincerity in promising to carry modern civilization to the people of Tripoli and Cirenaica.

AN INTERESTING PROGRAM AT THE
BUTLER TONIGHT

At the Butler this evening a very interesting program of pictures and vaudeville will be shown. The Heyman Sisters, a very clever team of vaudeville artists, open a week's engagement, appearing each evening in an entire change of program. These clever artists have just closed a successful week's engagement at Goldfield. The following comment appears in the Goldfield Tribune:

"The Heyman Sisters made quite a hit last night in the 'Texas Tommy' dance and are scored for even more for tonight's performance. This being their closing night the management has reserved their Hawaiian songs for the last performance. It will be quite a treat to hear these two girls chanting in the native Hawaiian language and the novelty of the occasion should bring out a large crowd. So go out and hear 'Aloha Oe' and 'Maid of Wai-ki-ki Beach' and 'Honolulu Tom Boy.'"

The following pictures will also be shown this evening: "Oh, Those Eyes," Biograph farce comedy; "An Arizona Escapade," Essanay. Very thrilling. "A Safe Proposition," a delightful Selig comedy of modern business methods, produced by Collin Campbell.

SHOULD WOMEN VOTE

No one who keeps posted on the great work being done by women in professional and business life, and, most important of all, in the American home, can for a moment doubt that they would vote wisely.

If they would only guard their own health as carefully as they do their children's they could accomplish even more.

One woman who knows how necessary it is to stay well is Mrs. Herman of North Birmingham, Ala. Her daughter, Miss Nona, says in a letter: "We have used Vinol in our family for four years. Whenever my mother gets a bad cold or feels weak and run-down, she always uses Vinol and it makes her well again. She says Vinol always gives her strength and builds her up."

"This delicious cod liver and iron remedy without oil is so certain to cure up chronic coughs, and build up weak-run-down, sickly people of all ages, that we sell it under a positive promise to give back your money if Vinol does not satisfy you. Try Vinol. Miners Drug Store, Inc., Tonopah, Nev."

The Bonanza has prepared and now has on sale, a new form of location blanks in books, suitable for pocket use and great convenience in the hills. The books are fitted with carbons and duplicate sheets. Price $1.25 each. If
